

CASE STUDY

Free Falling : Rapid Recovery with AuraWell PEMF

Challenge

Ice slip and fall accidents during winter months often lead to soft tissue injuries, swelling, bruising, and pain. A 47-year-old male suffered a painful elbow injury after falling on ice. Through the use of high-intensity PEMF treatments, he experienced significant healing and pain relief without the need for other interventions or medications.

Solution

Instead of following traditional treatment methods involving rest, ice, medications, and time, the client opted for PEMF therapy. PEMF (Pulsed Electromagnetic Field Therapy) utilizes pulsed electromagnetic energy to stimulate the body's natural healing processes at the cellular level. By recharging improperly functioning cells and reducing inflammation, PEMF can enhance the healing process and potentially decrease recovery time.

Results

Day 1: Significant pain (8/10), moderate swelling, and limited elbow range of motion. Initiated 15-minute NOVA HD PEMF treatment twice daily.

Day 2: Pain decreased to 3/10, no swelling, full elbow range of motion restored. He resumed activities with mild pain (3/10).

Day 3: Pain reduced to 0/10, and significant skin healing was observed. Full elbow range of motion achieved without pain or restrictions.

Day 4: Full recovery, no restrictions or pain during activities. Mild scabbing over the elbow. No medications or interventions were used.

Throughout the treatment, no pain medications, ice, or compression were required. AuraWell PEMF harnessed the body's healing capabilities, expediting recovery from weeks to days. This case study emphasizes the effectiveness and safety of alternative options for efficient injury recovery.
